

Tyema Sanchez, Community Activist/Web Designer

Tyema has over ten years' experience in event planning and 25+ years experience in administration in Corporate America. In 2016, she established a platform called Conscious Muslimahs to empower Muslim women while bridging the gap between Muslim and non-Muslim women. She created an Islamic website for women (www.ConsciousMuslimahs.com) with the hopes to inspire and uplift new Shahadahs giving them the same tools people gave her when she took Shahadah in 2015.

She loves sisterhood and everything related to uplifting, empowering and encouraging women around the world. She prides herself on providing platforms where women are living, laughing and learning from each other's life experiences.

Along with being a businesswoman, Tyema is also a philanthropist.

Tyema takes proud in her ability to ignite women and girls into fulfilling their potentials through volunteerism. Her mission is to create powerful volunteers that understand it is time for us to come together as one to save our communities. Each component is slightly different, but the goal remains the same; empowering women to rebuild their communities.

Her latest crusade is very dear to her heart; Handbags 4 Peace. Tyema is the co-founder and the mission behind this grassroots movement is to teach safety awareness to women and young girls. This movement was created in 2014 after women were being killed over their handbags in Philadelphia, Pa. The goal of the movement is to teach as many women and young girls self-defense in Philadelphia by offering monthly free classes. She received a citation from the City of Philadelphia for her continuous efforts to keep women in Philadelphia safe.
